Meri Saheli is India's largest selling Hindi magazine edited by actress danseuse and parliamentarian Hema Malini with regular features on food fashion films television women's issues and other topics of great interest to the Indian woman it helps her rise above the mundane and reach for the skies

Press in India 2001

This book explores the impact of railways on colonial Indian society from the commencement of railway operations in the mid nineteenth to the early decades of the twentieth century the book represents a historiographical departure using new archival evidence as well as travelogues written by Indian railway travellers in Bengali and Hindi this book suggests that the impact of railways on colonial Indian society were more heterogeneous and complex than anticipated either by India's colonial railway builders or currently assumed by post colonial scholars at a related level the book argues that this complex outcome of the impact of railways on colonial Indian society was a product of the interaction between the colonial context of technology transfer and the Indian railway passengers who mediated this process at an everyday level in other words this book claims that the colonised natives were not bystanders in this process of imposition of an imperial technology from above on the contrary Indians both as railway passengers and otherwise influenced the nature and the direction of the impact of an oft celebrated tool of empire the historiographical departures suggested in the book are based on examining railway spaces as social spaces a methodological index influenced by Henri Lefebvre's idea of social spaces as means of control domination and power
