transformation of northwest europe primarily britain france and belgium from the era of the first post roman european union under the carolingian frankish kings to the so called feudal age between c ad 600 and 1150 during these centuries radical changes occurred in the organisation of the rural world towns and complex communities of artisans and merchant traders emerged and networks of contact between northern europe the mediterranean and the middle and far east were redefined with long lasting consequences into the present day loveluck provides the most comprehensive comparative analysis of the rural and urban archaeological remains in this area for twenty five years supported by evidence from architecture relics manuscript illuminations and texts this book explains how the power and intentions of elites were confronted by the aspirations and actions of the diverse rural peasantry artisans and merchants producing both intended and unforeseen social changes with the emperor and the army in the later roman empire ad 235 395 mark hebblewhite offers the first study solely dedicated to examining the nature of the relationship between the emperor and his army in the politically and militarily volatile later roman empire bringing together a wide range of available literary epigraphic and numismatic evidence he demonstrates that emperors of the period considered the army to be the key institution they had to mollify in order to retain power and consequently employed a range of strategies to keep the troops loyal to their cause key to these efforts were imperial attempts to project the emperor as a worthy general imperator and a generous provider of military pay and benefits also important were the honorific and symbolic gestures each emperor made to the army in order to convince them that they and the empire could only prosper under his rule daily life and living conditions in the byzantine world are relatively underexplored subjects often neglected in comparison with more visible aspects of byzantine culture such as works of art the book is among the few publications on greek byzantine populations and helps pioneer a new approach to the subject opening a window on health status and dietary patterns through the lens of bioarchaeological research drawing on a diversity of disciplines biology chemistry archaeology and history the author focuses on the complex interaction between physiology culture and the environment in byzantine populations from crete in the 7th to 12th centuries the systematic analysis and interpretation of the mortality profiles the observed pathological conditions and of the chemical data all set in the cultural context of the era brings new evidence to bear on the reconstruction of living conditions in byzantine crete individual chapters look at the demographic profiles and mortality patterns of adult and non adult populations and study dietary habits and breastfeeding and weaning patterns in addition this book provides an indispensable body of primary data for future research in these fields and so furthers an interdisciplinary approach in tracing the health of the past populations the evolution of the public display of writing in roman cities this book comprises three closely related studies namely the nature of trade in the roman mediterranean c. 200 bc ad 600 decline and recovery byzantine trade c. 600 1150 and urban change and continuity in roman and byzantine corinth in addition a translation of the rhodian sea law an important text for maritime trading history is included as an appendix from rome to byzantium provides a detailed overview of trading activity in the roman and byzantine mediterranean grounded in recent archaeological research in particular it is argued that an element of free trade played a significant role in the direction and nature of trading in classical and late antiquity it is also suggested that the so called dark ages of the seventh and eighth centuries saw more continuity in terms of both commercial activity and urban life than is sometimes admitted presenting a large body of evidence for the first time this book offers a comprehensive treatment of nubian architecture sculpture and minor arts in the period between 300 bc ad 250 it focuses primarily on the nubian response to the traditional pharaonic hellenistic roman hellenizing and hybrid elements of ptolemaic and roman egyptian culture the author begins with a history of nubian art and a critical survey of the literature on ptolemaic and roman egyptian art special chapters are then devoted to the discussion of the egyptian greek interaction in the arts of ptolemaic egypt the place of egyptian hellenistic and hellenizing art within the oikumene the pluralistic visual world of ptolemaic and roman egypt as well as on the specific genre of terracotta sculpture utilizing examples from meroe city and musawwarat es sufra the author argues that cultural transfer from ptolemaic and roman egypt to nubia resulted in an inward focused adaptation therefore the resulting nubian art from this period expresses only those aspects of egyptian and greek art that are compatible with indigenous nubian goals the study of syria as a roman province has been
