in political literacy in composition and rhetoric defending academic discourse against postmodern pluralism rhetoric and writing scholar donald lazere calls for the revival of national council of teachers of english resolutions in the 1970s for teaching the critical reading listening viewing and thinking skills necessary to enable students to cope with the persuasive techniques in political statements advertising entertainment and news and explores the reasons these goals have been eclipsed in composition studies over recent decades a survey of obstacles to those goals begins with the emphasis in the profession on basic and first year writing at the expense of more advanced study in argumentative rhetoric and on the privileging of students personal writing over critical study of both academic and political discourse under the sway of postmodern pluralist theory the limitless multiplication of diverse voices stories conversations contact zones and local discursive sites has tended to destabilize or even denigrate any common ground of academic discourse and vocabulary including that of basic critical citizenship lazere argues that theorists who legitimately validate students multicultural home communities sometimes fail to recognize that liberal education presents a privileged space for students to grow beyond their home cultures and expand their horizons to awareness of national and international politics he similarly argues that ingenuous educational pluralism often serves to dissipate the coherent progressive consciousness and political action needed to confront the increasing domination of american public discourse by corporate oligarchy propaganda apparatuses and distraction from politics through consumerism and entertainment moreover the fixation in recent composition studies on liberally inclined students and communities on the margins has eclipsed attention to the conservative conformity long prevalent in mainstream america so the book explores means of challenging the conservative conditioning of students at middle american colleges like those where lazere has taught for many years his proposals for curriculum and pedagogy beyond first year writing seek to introduce students to a more highly informed cogent and open ended level of debate between the political left and right addressing scholars and teachers of rhetoric and writing lazere issues an imperative call for a less pluralistic but more literate writing classroom critically exploring medical thought in a cultural milieu with no discernible influence from the european enlightenment being human in a buddhist world reveals an otherwise unnoticed intersection of early modern sensibilities and religious values in traditional tibetan medicine it further studies the adaptation of buddhist concepts and values to medical concerns and suggests important dimensions of buddhism s role in the development of asian and global civilization through its unique focus and sophisticated reading of source materials being human adds a crucial chapter in the larger historiography of science and religion the book opens with the bold achievements in tibetan medical illustration commentary and institution building during the period of the fifth dalai lama and his regent desi sangye gyatso then looks back to the work of earlier thinkers tracing a strategically astute dialectic between scriptural and empirical authority on questions of history and the nature of human anatomy it follows key differences between medicine and buddhism in attitudes toward gender and sex and the moral character of the physician who had to serve both the patient s and the practitioner s well being being human in a buddhist world ultimately finds that tibetan medical scholars absorbed ethical and epistemological categories from buddhism yet shied away from ideal systems and absolutes instead embracing the imperfectability of the human condition
