great britain and the self governing colonies the issue of imperial federation was continuously and exhaustively discussed and promoted from the late 1860s through world war i the waters became so muddied that at times it has been difficult to separate arguments for closer imperial union from proposals for internal decentralization kendle comments extensively on this confusion during the fifty years from the early 1870s to the establishment of the irish free state in 1922 politicians and publicists devoted considerable energy and attention to the notions of home rule all round devolution and federalism as possible means of resolving the urgent political administrative and constitutional issues confronting the united kingdom the increasing complexity of government business the gathering forces of ethnic nationalism in ireland scotland and wales and concern with maintaining and strengthening the role of the parliament at westminister in imperial affairs combined to keep the possibility of decentralization at the forefront of political and public debate kendle explores and analyzes the motives and attitudes of participants in this debate and looks at the schemes and proposals that resulted from this power struggle ireland and the federal solution gives a lucid appraisal of what was meant at the time by the terms federalism home rule all round and devolution and evaluates how firmly the participants grasped the constitutional similarities and differences between existing federal systems reprint of the original first published in 1872 statistics organized by
