different whether they call them policies standards or simply rules too often they sound like a sergeant barking orders at the troops that tone of voice might have been acceptable in the past but it is not effective in today s workplace as you update your corporate administrative and operational policies to meet changing times this book invites you to rethink how you draft rules it shows you how to organize and reduce the length of policy instruments sound strict without sounding dictatorial or combative eliminate negative messaging choose words that encourage compliance and reduce the time required for drafting and approval employees and customers expect to be spoken to with respect poorly written rules reflect badly on your organization even when they exist only as the remnants of a culture your organization had in the past well written rules invite engagement they are positive and helpful focusing on targets and collaboration rather than prohibitions and punishments a few What Entrepreneurs Need to Know about Government 2004-08-30 what happens to your teaching business when students don't pay or don't pay on time there aren't any rules unless you put them into place yourself set the rules at the first meeting because a freelance teacher's income is jeopardised when they are not paid on time and their bills cannot be paid and that is why you should always set payment rules from the outset a regular income a steady cash flow keeps your teaching business alive remember 80 per cent of businesses fail because they run out of money make sure you have a teaching service contract detailing your payment policies when students are expected to pay and what happens when payment is late when customers sit before you teaching service contracts secure a legally sound footing for freelancers when making payment claims it is their only legal and binding proof a teaching payment agreement exists between them and their students in fact should their relationship with one of their student turn sour and they need a lawyer the first thing they will be asked is do you have a contract contracts are simple reality checks to decide whether freelancers can work with a customer if both sides respect the contract they can work together a lawyer is the best person to guarantee a contract is made correctly on the other hand they are expensive for most teaching freelancers a lawyer is a luxury they cannot afford so a self made contract must suffice a self made teaching service contract is better than none if you have never prepared a business contract before you may be quite daunted by the prospect of creating one for example what details must be written into contracts what elements are usually forgotten in agreements absenteeism etc situations when a lawyer must check the wording in contracts for this purpose freelancers can use a teaching service agreement example as a basis for creating their own contracts the contract example presented is for educational
